In a Different World: The Lived Experiences of African American Female School Counselors in Texas Title I Schools

African American female school counselors often function in multiple roles professionally and personally. African American female school counselors in Texas Title I schools must overcome language barriers, community stakeholders, and non-counseling duties to acquire the time to meet the unconventional needs of the student population. This study examines how African American female elementary school counselors perceive their roles, responsibilities, and experiences in servicing low-socioeconomic minority students in Texas elementary Title I schools.
